SHEPPERD IS ARRESTED AGAIN

Manilla Man Taken Into Custody Yesterday on a Very Serious Charge

GAVE BOND FOR $1000

Man Recently Acquitted on Two Charges, Now Has to Answer to Serious Allegations

William Shepperd, of Manilla, was placed under arrest Friday afternoon in Shelbyville, by Sheriff John Butler on the charge of attempted illicit relations with little Pearl Ingermier, of Fountaintown. The alleged crime was committed last fair week and the investigation by the grand jury led to the indictment of Shepperd. He gave bond in the sum of $1000 in cash, for his appearance in court next December.

It is alleged that after enticing pretty six-year-old Pearl Ingermier, daughter of Frank Ingermier, of Fountaintown into a stall at the Shelbyville fair grounds at four o'clock a. m., Saturday, September 7th, and subjecting the child to heinous and hideous treatment, Shepperd was arrested and confined in jail pending action of the court of justice.

At the time of his arrest last September he was charged with assault and battery, the prosecutor at that time being unable to find a statute that directly covered the fellow's treatment of the child.

In the preliminary he was discharged. Soon after his return to Manilla he was arrested on a charge of larceny from the Rush circuit court and in trial also escaped punishment.

Shepperd married Miss Bessie Levi, of this city, but their domestic life was an unhappy one and they separated and were afterwards divorced. Shepperd is an "alleged actor" and traveled with several cheap companies during the past few years.

THE WEATHER

Generally fair tonight and Sunday. Warmer Sunday.

SCHOOL CHILDREN WILL HAVE TWO DAYS OFF

The Day After Thanksgiving Set Aside For "Recovery Day"

Children attending the Rushville public school will secure a two days' Thanksgiving vacation this year, following an old precedent. Thursday, November 28th, on which date they will be privileged to gorge themselves with choice turkey and other tantalizing viands, and Friday, the 29th, a day for recuperation.

Many teachers in the schools will leave for their various homes to spend Turkey day. School will resume on the following Monday.

WILL HAVE WORK SEVERAL PLACES

Farmers Institute Will be Held in Five Towns in Rush County

FEASIBLE PLAN MADE

Which Will be of Vast Benefit to the Farmers in Outlying Township

E. E. Hungerford, county superintendent of farmers institutes, said today that it has been arranged with the State Superintendent of Institutes to hold this year several institutes in various parts of Rush county. This is a splendid idea as it will give farmers in every part of the county an opportunity to attend one or more institutes. Good, practical men have been assigned to speak at each of these meetings. Following is the date and places: Manilla, December 4th, Milroy, December 5th, and Falmouth, December 6th; Oliver Kline, of Huntington, will be the speaker; at these meetings: Arlington, December 7th, A. O. Lockridge, of Greencastle, speaker; Carthage, December 13-14th, J. B. Barris, of Cloverdale, Ind., and W. B. Anderson, of Velpen, Ind., speakers.

It is expected that the township vice president and other local officers will arrange for a place of meeting and help in every way to make these institutes a great success.

MOTHER WOULD BELIEVE SON DEAD

Report That Otto Lewark Was Killed by Train Proved to be Untrue

In some inexplicable manner a report was circulated around Rushville this morning to the effect that Otto Lewark had been killed by falling off a train near Greensburg last night about 12 o'clock. A visit to the Lewark home, where the reporter expected to witness a "scene" brought out the fact that Otto was much alive and was sleeping the sleep of the just, having not yet arisen.

When his mother was asked if the report was true she replied that she had heard it, but did not believe it, inasmuch as the young man was then asleep in the next room.

THOUSANDS OF TURKEYS SOLD

Over 16,00 Were Shipped
From Old Rush County
This Week

TO THE EASTERN MARKETS

Not as Many Turkeys are Raised in the County Now as in Former Years

The last shipment of Thanksgiving turkeys for the Eastern markets will be made tonight by the Adams Produce company.

For the past few days a number of expert pickers have been making the feathers fly at the company's place of business in South Main street.

About 1600 of Rush county's plump-turkeys will find their way to the tables of the Easterners on Thanksgiving and while the epicureans over East are enjoying the delicious birds, the Rush county farmers will manifest more of a thanksgiving spirit when he handled the cash received in exchange for his turkeys.

There are not so many turkeys raised in this county as in former years, for the matter of "rearing" fowls on the farm has been revolutionized. In the days when there were many poor tenants, and small land owners, much attention was given to raising poultry, but now the tenant and farm hand is busily employed in caring for stock when not engaged in tilling the soil and looking after the crops.

LOST CONTROL OF HIS ENTIRE BODY

Will Felt's Arms Began to Wave
Frantically When He Received Shock

Will Felt, who received 2300 volts of electricity at the Park furniture factory Thursday afternoon, tells an interesting story of his experience. He says that the shock was by no means an unpleasant sensation, though it sent him reeling across the room. His entire body became numb instantaneously and once he let loose of the receiver his arms began to wave through the air, and continued for several seconds, as he lost all control of his body. Electricians say that it was a miraculous escape from instant death.

His fingers are burned to the bone and until today he did not have the proper use of them. The wires of both phones were burned out, and one was broken.

FAIRLY FLEW ON ROLLER SKATES

Eddie Carter Defeats Four Starters—Make Mile in Three Minutes

An interesting mile race on roller skates was held at the Kramer rink last night. There were five starters, Eddie Carter, Clifford Jarvis, Ralph Stiffler, Glen Moore and Glen Reece. Carter won the race which was twenty laps around the rink. The mile was made in a little over three minutes.

Next Monday night another mile race will be "rolled" and the winner will race with Eddie Carter on the following Wednesday night for a prize and the championship of the city.

HUNDREDS WERE TURNED AWAY

When Watson Spoke at St.
Louis Last Tuesday Night on Demagogism

MADE GOOD IMPRESSION

Congressman Urges Capital and Labor to Unite and Work
For Each Other

Of Congressman Watson's lecture in St. Louis Tuesday night, the St. Louis Globe Democrat says in part:

"More than 400 people were turned away from the Odeon last night without hearing James E. Watson, the Republican whip of the National House of Representatives and the Republican candidate for governor of Indiana, lecture on 'Demagogism and Demagogues.' He began speaking at 8 o'clock, but long before that hour every seat in the house was occupied and the full standing-room limit of the house filled.

"Mr. Watson was introduced by Fred O. Schwedtmann, secretary of the association, in the absence of J. W. Van Cleave. He spoke for a short time on the financial situation. He introduced Mr. Watson as the future governor of Indiana and emphasized that he would speak, not as a politician, but from the viewpoint of the statesman, the citizen and the patriot.

"In his lecture 'Demagogism and Demagogues,' Mr. Watson spoke of the demagogue and his disturbing effect to a harmonious relationship between capital and labor. He said there was absolutely no foundation for discord between these two, while there is every incentive for harmony. In part, he said:

"The golden thread running through this discourse is equality for all men. No tongue can recount the achievements of labor. Labor in America has accumulated more wealth in the last forty years than has England in the whole 1000 years of her history. All of this was wrought by toil.

"This shows that it pays for labor to be free, for a free laborer is a thinker, and we should be thankful that it is thus in America. Free labor creates the wealth, the fashion and the prosperity of the country. Therefore the three indispensable requisites to the American people's happiness are: Good money and plenty of it; steady employment at good wages and a ready market for both products and services. This makes it necessary that labor and capital be in harmony.

"Idle hands mean closed mills; closed mills mean industrial stagnation, and this in the end means want and despair. The products and output of America have now become so great that there is a surplus after Europe is fully supplied, and this makes it potent that America must now cater to the far East to dispose of this surplus."

"Mr. Watson then spoke of the moral privileges of the workman, and said that the only way to keep them was to hold the present market for outputs and gain more. He again brought out the fact that labor and capital must work together, and said that the best way for them to do this was for the employee to work for the interest of his employer, and the employer to work for the interest of his employees.

"Mr. Watson spoke casually of the financial situation. He said that in his estimation there was absolutely nothing to fear in the situation, and that the present depression is practically over. He said that there was no occasion for the present condition of affairs that he knew of."

When England capitalists were trying to establish Angora goat raising in South Africa they paid as much as $2,500 apiece for goats, to induce the Turkish owners of fine flocks to risk the severe penalties of the Sultan's laws forbidding the exportation of Angoras.

TEACHERS ASSOCIATION WAS IN SESSION TODAY

Prof. Curry of the State Normal
Delivers Interesting
Address

The Teachers Association of Rush county, was in session at the court house today and a large number of pedagogues were in attendance.

Prof. Curry of the State Normal was one of the principal speakers of the day, and all the teachers enjoyed his talks, especially the rendition of an analytic, cross-fire poem on the old classic, "Maude Muller." Supt. W. O. Headlee was in charge of the meeting.

ALL AFRAID OF THE LOCAL LADS

Four Foot Ball Teams Back
Away From Scheduled Games

GAME CANCELLED TODAY

Shelbyville Manager Said Parents Objected to Some of the Boys Playing

It seems that the Rushville high school foot ball eleven "has the Indian sign" on every thing in this neck of the woods, for in the past few weeks, four teams, New Castle, Connersville, Greensburg and Shelbyville have showed the white feather and laid down with a copper on them.

Yesterday Manager Guernsey Abernathy received word from Shelbyville that they were obliged to declare the game off on account of parental objections—and thirteen other reasons.

The boys had made preparations to go today, and a howling female host of twenty-five have been saving their money all week, "cutting out" the five cent theatres, "skating rink, hot sodas, and chewing gum, to have enough change to go with the bunch: they were sorely disappointed.

Rushville has a strong team this year, and consequently the sister cities, who arranged games early in the season, have been backing down when it came their turn to do battle with the hunky gridironers.

TOM MULL TO MAKE RACE FOR SENATE

Manilla Man is Being Put Forward by Rush County Republicans

Friends of Tom Mull, of Manilla, Rush county, says the Indianapolis Star, want him to run for the Republican nomination for Joint-Senator in the district composed of Fayette, Rush and Hancock counties, and at present represented by E. E. Moore, of Connersville. Rush county Republicans are insisting that the nomination should go to them by the rules of rotation. At first Ernest Thomas, of Rushville, was boomed for the nomination, but he declined, and now they have taken up Mr. Mull. Mr. Mull was in the Senate several years ago. He is a farmer and banker and takes an active hand in Republican politics in the Sixth district.

WILL SOLVE A BIG QUESTION

The Matter of Housecleaning Will Not be a Nightmare Hereafter

A CHANCE FOR BRAINS

Big Fortune and Commendation Awaits Inventor Who Will Displace the Hired Girl

It is said that "necessity is the mother of invention." On account of the scarcity of housecleaning help, a machine has been invented to do it even better and more thorough than human help. These machines are being installed in every town and Rushville will have one of the newest and most improved in operation early in the spring. To complete the good housewife's happiness a machine to take the place of the hired girl should be brought out. This is a field where an inventor cannot alone earn good money, but he will solve one of the hardest problems of the age, and at the same time earn the gratitude of the women of this land.

The men—well that is another matter and puts a different aspect on the question. Some of them would not give up the hired girl at any cost, for she makes a companion for the wife, on nights that he is out other than lodge nights.

If improvements continue to come in the future as they have in the past few years, it is only a question of time until we will probably have the "wifeless husband" in this country: everything is being "figured down" to the minimum.

WOLF CAPTURED AT FOUNTAINTOWN

After a Scare of Over a Week,
People are Now Sleeping Peacefully

The Montana wolf which has been running at large in the vicinity of Fountaintown has been captured after a four days chase. It gave the women of that community quite a scare, and some parents kept their children home from school while the animal was at large.

The wolf had returned to the town, presumably for the purpose of seeing its mate which was still confined in a cage, when it ran into a large steel trap set for it.

It had been the hope of the owner of the two wolves that the one which was out would return at night to see its mate, but there was nothing to indicate that it had been done so until Thursday night when it was caught.

HAYMAKERS READY FOR THE BIG NIGHT

Rabbit Fest Will be Held in Local Hay Loft Following
Parade

The Haymakers met last night in their hayloft and made final arrangements for their parade and rabbit fest, which will be held next Friday night. Arrangements are being made to entertain a number of out-of-town visitors on that night. Several "tramps" will be initiated.

FOUL PLAY FEARED STOCK WATERING

Labor Feud at Hammond May Investigator Ivins Declares Have Had a Tragic Sequel. Tom Johnson Had a Hand In This.

DISAPPEARANCE AT GARY SOLD A MOIST CONCERN

Electrical Workers' Officer After Revoking Charter of Local Union Has Not Been Seen.

Before Starting For Hammond James Noonan Had Expressed Fears For His Life.

Hammond, Ind., Nov. 23.—There is fear in Chicago and in this city, where a jurisdictional fight between the factions of the Hammond electrical workers has been of long duration, that James Noonan, grand vice president of the International Electrical Workers, has met with foul play. At the request of friends, Captain O'Brien of the Chicago police force, has requested Fred Rimbach, police chief of this city, to ascertain what has become of Noonan, as his whereabouts is unknown.

The Hammond police have traced Noonan to Gary, where he told the union men that Gary was under the jurisdiction of the Chicago organization, and that they should go ahead regardless of the central body of Hammond. Noonan came to this city last Thursday to revoke the charter of local No. 571, Hammond Electrical Workers, and he is said to have expressed fear to Chicago friends before starting for Hammond that he would never come back alive.

TAGGART NON-COMMITTAL

Answers With a Laugh When Asked If He Will Be a Candidate.

French Lick, Ind., Nov. 23.—At a conference of the members of the Democratic national committee here it was decided to hold a meeting of the committee at Washington, Dec. 12, for the purpose of selecting a time and place for the national Democratic convention next year. Chairman Thomas Taggart of the committee presided at the conference, which was held Friday afternoon. He said there were present eighteen members and six other members were represented by proxy. Three other members arrived last night. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Louisville, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Atlantic City, Denver, and Long Branch, N. J., are applicants for the honor of entertaining the next national convention. A Cincinnati delegation representing that city asked the conference what the committee wanted, to which question the committee replied by asking what Cincinnati would give. The delegation replied that an answer would be given at the December meeting. Charles F. Wilson, representing Denver, said that city was building a hall to seat 15,000 people, and he told the conference that Denver would bring to the Washington meeting $100,000 in gold as a further inducement to defray the expenses of the convention. George S. Lenhart of Atlantic City supplied the conference with literature booming that city for the convention. Louisville and Chicago were represented before the committee members today. Other cities are expected to be represented at the Washington meeting.

Many of the members of the committee, some of whom are accompanied by their families, will remain here over Sunday. National Chairman Taggart will be a candidate for re-election as the Indiana member of the national committee. When asked if he would be a candidate for re-election as chairman of the national committee, Mr. Taggart's only reply was a laugh.

Not Guilty of Murder.
Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 23.—After being out less than an hour the jury found that Otis Allen shot and killed Leonard Sparks while acting in self-defense, and he was set at liberty by Judge Wilson. The tragedy occurred nearly two months ago at Sanders, a small station south of this city, and the testimony went to show that Sparks had threatened Allen, and at the time of the shooting had forced him into a corner and had struck him.

It Was Too Much for Him.
Bedford, Ind., Nov. 23.—William J. Masters of Red Cross, this county, has been declared insane and he has been removed to the Central Indiana hospital. Mr. Masters, who is fifty years old, is a native of Kentucky, and his insanity is attributed to his anxiety over the result of the recent election in Kentucky, where he formerly lived.

Stepped on Live Wire.
Kentland, Ind., November 23.—John Strickler, fifty years old, manager of the Kentland electric light plant, was killed by stepping on a live wire. The sole of his shoe and the great toe of his left foot were burned to a crisp. He is survived by a widow and several children.

Life Sentence Affirmed.
Indianapolis, Nov. 23.—The judgment convicting Ernest Sanderson of complicity in the murder of his half-brother, Edward Preston Sanderson, near Hartford City, and sentencing him to life imprisonment, has been affirmed by the supreme court.

According to This Statement $6,250,000 of "Water" Was Added to Stock of Old Nassau Company.

Thus Loaded Up the Company Was Sold to Brooklyn Rapid Transit, It Is Declared.

New York, Nov. 23.—William I. Ivins, while investigating the affairs of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company for the public service commission, declared that Mayor Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland and his friends, who formerly owned the Nassau Electric Railway company of Brooklyn, had watered its stock to the extent of $6,250,000 and then sold it to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company. This was alleged to have taken place in a reorganization of the Nassau company in January, 1899.

Questioning Timothy S. Williams, vice president of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company, about the reorganization of the Nassau company, Mr. Ivins said:

"On that reorganization I find that they increased their bond issue, which had theretofore been $5,500,000, by an additional $8,946,960. They made an entirely new issue of preferred stock of $6,000,000, they theretofore having no preferred stock, and that to the theretofore existing $6,000,000 of common stock they added $2,500,000, making a total of new issues of $17,946,960, and your acquisition was after this increase of capitalization. Can you tell me what these new securities were issued for?"

Mr. Williams said an explanation of the transaction was given in an agreement which Mr. Ivins had, but this was not read. Mr. Williams also contended that the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company, if it had bought $6,250,000 of water, had subsequently squeezed it out.

"I cannot agree with you," said Mr. Ivins. "It looks to me like a plain case of stock-watering, and the company had no right to charge that $6,000,000 on its books to the cost and equipment of the road."

LAWYERS WRANGLE

Defense in Walsh Case Bitterly Resists Astonishing Testimony.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Constant wrangling between attorneys delayed progress in the trial of John R. Walsh, charged with misapplication of the funds of the Chicago National bank, yesterday. Frederick W. McLean, cashier of the bank, took the stand in the morning to identify a series of memorandum notes which he asserted he had made out and signed with various names, later discounting these notes, and all on orders from Mr. Walsh. So vigorous, however, were the objections of the defense that the cashier had not finished his story when adjournment was taken. He will resume the stand Monday.

The introduction of memorandum notes executed prior to the time of the first offense charged was made the chief point of attack on the part of Attorneys Miller and Haynes for the defense. Judge Anderson, however, ruled that such notes might be admitted as tending to show possible intent to remove funds from the bank wrongfully. Five such notes, each for $92,000, were thus brought before the jury, McLean testifying that he had signed and discounted them in obedience to the orders of Walsh. The signatures on the instruments were: W. E. Dunn, Henry Rosier, J. L. Bogy, W. S. Anthony, C. J. Stanton.

The State Was Satisfied.

Georgetown, Ky., Nov. 23.—At 3:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the jury-box in the trial of Caleb Powers was filled, four of the possible jurors being from Harrison county and eight from Grant, this resulting from the retention of the four men who qualified from the first venire from Harrison county. The jury was composed of eight Democrats, three Republicans and one independent. The commonwealth challenged the one independent. Four men were called before the vacancy was filled, after which the commonwealth accepted the jury. The defense used several peremptory challenges, leaving five men on the jury, three Republicans and two Democrats.

Disappointed Laborers.
Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 23.—Unemployed laborers from the United States are pouring over the Niagara frontier into Canada, drawn here by tales of great Canadian prosperity and of a demand for labor in the railway construction camps. Hundreds landed in Canada paupers, and as there is no work for them, it is almost certain that they will spend the winter as vagrants in county jails.

About Ready for Jury.
Rathdrum Idaho, Nov. 23.—It is expected the Steve Adams case will be given to the jury today.

TALKED IT OVER

J. P. Morgan Makes a Night Call on the President by Appointment.

HE FIRST SAW CORTELYOU

After a Talk With Secretary of the Treasury, Big Financier Makes a Call at the White House.

He Was Accompanied by the President of the First National Bank of New York.

Washington, Nov. 23.—J. Pierpont Morgan and George F. Baker, the latter president of the First National bank of New York city, arrived here yesterday afternoon for a conference with Secretary Cortelyou of the treasury department. At 10 o'clock last night Messrs. Morgan and Baker, accompanied by Assistant Secretary Robert Bacon of the state department, went to the White House to see the president by appointment.

The object of their visit was not divulged, but it was believed to be in relation to the financial situation. Upon leaving the White House at 11:25, after being with the president an hour and a half, Mr. Morgan on being asked in regard to the developments, replied that conditions in New York were reassuring. He said that everything possible was being done to relieve the money stringency and that the situation was satisfactory. Mr. Morgan said also that his object in coming to Washington was to see Secretary Cortelyou in furtherance of the conference he had with the secretary in New York last week, at which time means were discussed for the further relief of the situation. He saw Secretary Cortelyou before going to the White House, and he called on President Roosevelt to pay his respects.

An important announcement of policy has been made by Secretary Cortelyou in regard to the allotment of the new one-year treasury certificates, which indicates that the secretary is prepared to cut red tape as far as possible and place the proceeds of the sale of the certificates promptly at the disposal of the money market. He proposes to return to national banks subscribing for the certificates as a deposit of public money 75 per cent of the cash paid for them. The remaining 25 per cent will go for the time being to strengthen the cash balance of the treasury. The banks surrendering this 25 per cent will not, however, suffer a deduction in their supply of currency, for they will be entitled to receive the par value of the certificates purchased in new bank-note circulation. In order to make this transaction immediately effective the treasury will retain the certificates purchased by each bank, if it desires that they be deposited with the United States treasury as surety for circulation and will ship the notes at once. Secretary Cortelyou is studying the applications for certificates carefully in order to make the allotments in the manner which will be the most beneficial to the monetary situation. The secretary continued to receive calls today from prominent bankers, and letters from various points in regard to the new issues.

The bids for the Panama 2 per cent bonds are being kept sealed until the time for closing the receipts of bids, which is a week from today. This prevents any calculation as to the amount subscribed for or the prices offered. The number of offers is already sufficient to indicate quite general response from the banks of the country.

Took a Deadly Dose.

St. Louis, Nov. 23.—George P. Miller, aged forty-eight years, once a brilliant law graduate and private secretary to S. J. Randall of Pennsylvania, formerly speaker of the national house of representatives, swallowed whisky and morphine in a Pine street boarding house, and died.

Stern Collecting Measures.

St. Louis, Nov. 23.—Two boys, children of Albert Johnson, were carried away by Leona Mayers, a domestic employed in the Johnson home. The girl left a note behind saying she had taken the children and would not surrender them until wages which she said were due her were paid.

NOAH'S DIARY IN MICHIGAN!

Offering of Patriarch's Alleged Record Uncovers Big Curio Swindle.

The offering of an alleged copy of Noah's diary, engraved upon a copper tablet dug up in Michigan, to a Wisconsin collector has resulted in uncovering one of the cleverest relic swindles of recent years, says a Detroit special to the New York Times.

Michigan copper formed the basis of the enterprise, which consisted in manufacturing ancient Indian relics out of copper, painting them green to represent verdigris, dipping them in corrosive acid and burying them in mounds, after which they were dug up by relic hunting expeditions under the leadership of the promoters.

The relic manufacturers branched off from Indian relics and dug up in the presence of reputable witnesses bronze tablets inscribed with hieroglyphics and symbols of the Biblical deluge and the tower of Babylon. The makers would have had collectors believe that Michigan was the seat of the original flood and that Noah's ark floated somewhere among Michigan's low hills, where they said the real Mount Ararat was located.

The diary of Noah was offered to a wealthy man of Wisconsin, who asked the advice of a museum curator as to accepting it. This man had had considerable experience with fakes and warned the relic patron.

MAKING HAZING PAY.

Oklahoma Student Forced to Sell Cake Turners Has Been Coining Money.

The hazing of one freshman was the best thing that ever happened to this young man, for it enabled him to find a way to pay for his college education at Oklahoma university, says a Norman (Okla.) special dispatch to the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

He protested mightily when he was compelled to pack his grip with patent cake turners and peddle them through the town. As he went from house to house the other students stood on the sidewalk and made comments on his ability as a salesman.

Now, the griddlecake season, which recently opened, and the idea of a device that would turn the buckwheat and corn cakes automatically appealed to the housewives. In less than no time he had disposed of the lot at a big profit.

Then he hustled back for another supply and as quickly disposed of these. He made money fast, and the fellows who set up the job on him began to sit up and take notice. It was not long before a score were scattering cake turners through the country, but they had to share with the freshman, for he had himself made general agent.

PEANUTS VERSUS EGGS.

Mayor Becker Challenged to a Debate on Their Relative Value.

Some people hold with much tenacity to the idea that the egg is the most valuable article of diet. Others, perhaps not many, argue that the peanut supplies all the necessary ingredients of proper proportions for the maintenance of life.

The relative merits of these two articles of food may be discussed upon the public rostrum in Milwaukee by no less a personage than his honor the mayor and Dr. Thomas Allen of Aurora, says the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin.

Dr. Allen is a highly enthusiastic exponent of the peanut. He is living for sixty days on a diet of unroasted peanuts and likes it. Why he has chosen Mayor Becker as the champion of the egg as against the peanut is not clear. The other day, however, Dr. Allen, according to his Aurora press agent, sent a challenge to Mayor Becker inviting him to engage in a contest before a jury of American citizens who shall decide which is the better article of diet, the peanut or the egg.

Champion Corn Cutter.

Charles Cannon of Bristol, Pa., finished his season of cutting corn the other day and says, according to the Philadelphia Ledger, that he has broken all former records and has cut more corn in a given time than any man who ever lived or who will ever live. "And I have earned in twenty-eight days $225.75," he says, "and if I had twenty-eight more days to cut I could do it. I challenge the world to do what I have done this season in cutting 5,450 shocks."

Mules as Bridal Team.

Three mules drew the carriage of a well known Bristol (Pa.) couple, Hugh McGinly and Miss Mary E. Croughan, through the streets after their wedding at St. Mark's Catholic church the other day, says a Bristol dispatch. The team was trimmed with flowers and ribbons and attracted much attention. The Rev. Father Bunce performed the ceremony.

Talking of Christmas.

They're talking of the Christmas—"How long is it, an' when will Santa Claus be comin' down the chimney place again?" For the toy stores are open, their glittering wares in line, and they win their hearts, old fellow, like they once did yours and mine!

They're talking of the Christmas—"Tomorrow will it be?" Is Santa Claus in Greenland? Is he comin' 'cross the sea?

Will he have a heap more reindeer, a bigger load of toys?" The time flies fast, old fellow, but the boys are still the boys!

They're talkin' of the Christmas—its glories and its gleams. It's with them in their waking, it sings to them in dreams.

And the Christmas stars will twinkle—the Christmas skies aglow— Same stars and skies, old fellow, we loved so long ago!

RICH FOSSIL FINDS.

Tiny Horse and Giant Bear Tusk Unearthed In Wyoming.

PONY NO LARGER THAN A FOX.

Wild Region Now Regarded as Original Equine Home—Beavers the Size of Mice Found—Specimen of Huge Lizard Discovered.

That Wyoming was once a Lilliputian world, occupied by pygmy animals in the likeness of animals on earth today, is the scientific fact which paleontologists of the Wyoming State university are preparing to give to the world, says a Cheyenne (Wyo.) special dispatch to the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Horses no larger than a modern fox, beavers the size of mice, dogs as small as coyotes and other animals built upon the same miniature lines are now known to have existed in the mountains of Wyoming millions of years ago, and their skeletons are now being set up in the museum of the State university by Professor W. H. Reed, paleontologist of the university and curator of the museum of natural history of that institution.

Professor Reed spent the entire summer in the great fossil beds of central Wyoming and says his discoveries therein are among the most important ever reported to science. In the past the discoveries in those beds have been confined to animals built upon tremendous lines, monsters of prodigious size and ferocity, but the discoveries recently made public by Professor Reed prove that the contrasts between the animals of that ancient time were as great as between those of Lilliputia and Brobdingnag.

In fact, if Dean Swift had happened into central Wyoming in those days he might have believed he had actually reached Lilliputia.

By the securing of the fossil of the little horse Professor Reed confirmed the surmise heretofore held that Wyoming was the real birthplace of the horse. He has an almost complete skeleton of the antediluvian horse, showing that animal to have been no larger than a fox of the present day, but with every bone of the present horse and in much the same shape.

The little animal was evidently a hardy grazer, capable of much hardship in securing its food, and even in that early day the horse showed great swiftness of foot and possessed speed sufficient to enable it to keep out of the clutches of flesh eating animals.

But Professor Reed attaches more importance to the fossil beaver than to the horse even. The beaver is from the algoncine tertiary age, one of the oldest in which fossils are found, and shows that that animal flourished at that early period in the earth's existence. The specimen is a perfect skull and upper jaw of the rodent. The skull is less than half an inch long and shows the beaver of that age to have been even smaller than an ordinary mouse. The molars are only an eighth of an inch long and the incisors not much longer.

He was also fortunate enough to secure the complete skeleton of a dog of the algoncine tertiary age, not a bone being missing. The skeleton is about the size of a coyote of the western plains.

But if some of the animals discovered by Professor Reed were small others he found were big enough to make the average large. An important find was the almost complete skull of a calf titanotherium, a monster of that day which was extinct long before some of the oldest fossils heretofore found were even created.

Not the least interesting of the finds was the tusk of a monster bear, the big tusk indicating an animal weighing about 2,600 pounds. The tusk is complete, but is in three pieces, and shows an animal which must have been a terror to the other animals in that age.

A fossil of one of the great lizard family was discovered in a sandstone cliff, where it can be seen stretched out to its full length, high up on the face of the bluff. Nearly seventy-five feet of the great reptile can be seen, preserved in solid rock.

Professor Reed says the field he visited, called "Hell's Half Acre," is the most remarkable fossil quarry in the world. It abounds in fossil remains of great value to science, and every year all the large eastern universities send field parties there to excavate and to add to the museums.

The fact that so many fossils are found in the "Hell's Half Acre" has led scientists to believe that the whole surface of the earth was changed by some mighty convulsion of nature and that place was left as a high point, the animals gathering there to escape the devastating floods.

Another theory is that when some great famine came upon the land this spot was left the one of all others where food was plentiful, and all animals of that day and time were attracted there to die in some cataclysm which left the fossil remains for the present generation of mankind to unearth.

U. S. A. Dirigible Balloon.

The United States war department is about to award a contract for the construction of its first dirigible balloon, says the Engineer. The balloon will be about 190 feet in length, with a capacity of 50,000 cubic feet, will have two 120-horsepower French engines and is calculated to make thirty-five miles an hour. It is to cost some $60,000.

TIN CAN LURE FOR DEER.

Hunter Tries Tiger Catching Trick He Says He Learned In India.

If a fine old buck hadn't been so anxious to read the labels on several tin cans he would still be propelling his antlers through the forests of Sullivan county, N. Y., instead of lying in state at the home of Farmer John Quick. Daniel Space of New York city arrived at the Quick homestead a few days ago with a trunkful of bullets and a brand new scheme for putting venison on the table, says a Port Jervis special dispatch to the New York World.

Quick and Space soon started out to ascertain if the latter's plan for trapping deer was practicable. The plan consisted of stringing about twenty tomato cans on a rope and stretching the rope across the runway. While one of the hunters stood near the cans the other was to go back in the woods and drive the deer toward the opening. The scheme worked satisfactorily the first time it was tried.

Quick succeeded in locating a deer and driving it toward the runway where Space lay in wait. When the deer was within 200 yards Space gave the rope a yank, and the cans set up an awful jangling. The deer was suspicious at first. He hesitated for a moment, and then his curiosity got the better of him. Pulling his antlers down and tying them beneath his chin, he sneaked up to the cans and began to inspect them. While thus engaged Space took careful aim and brought the animal to the ground with his seventh shot.

"That's a trick I learned in India," said Space. "They use the tin can trap out there to catch tigers. I could have killed him with the first shot, but I gave him an opportunity to finish his inspection of the cans."

The buck was a fine specimen and weighed 265 pounds.

COXEY'S SECOND CRUSADE.

The "General" Will Travel by Special Train This Time.

Jacob Sechler Coxey, who led Coxey's army of the unemployed to Washington in 1894 to present a petition to congress, is rapidly preparing for his second crusade, says a Cincinnati special dispatch to the New York Times. He will not lead an army this time, but will tour the country in a special train, carrying with him a circus tent.

"I am getting ready to go before the people and will soon start my campaign," said Coxey the other day. "I tried to appear before the representatives of the people in 1894 and landed in jail. Now I am going to appeal to the people who make the representatives, and I think I shall be more successful."

Coxey will tell the people in the campaign soon to be started about his non-interference bearing bond bill, the enactment of which he believes will solve the problem of corporate control, railroad legislation, currency expansion and public improvements.

NEW VIEW OF SPREES.

Medicinal, Says Harvard Man, Not Drunks, but Eccentric Activities.

Professor William James, the Harvard psychologist, says, according to a Cambridge dispatch to the New York Tribune, that a spree is an "eccentric activity," not a jag, a drunk, a "smuch" or a "souse."

There is no doubt, says the professor, that to some men sprees and excesses of almost any kind are medicinal—temporarily, at any rate—in spite of what moralists and physicians say. Some men "spree it" on one kind of drink, some on another; some do it on mixed drinks. He cites the case of a colonel who found during the siege of Delhi that brandy and opium keyed him up to heroic aspirations.

When men are oppressed, says Professor James, a period of "eccentric activity" relieves the pressure.

TRUST ANYWAY.

Cardinal Gibbons Says That's Best, Whether Coin Says So or Not.

Cardinal Gibbons, when asked the other night for his opinion on the action of President Roosevelt in having the motto "In God We Trust" omitted from the new ten dollar gold coin, at first said he did not care to discuss the matter, says a Baltimore special to the New York Times.

"It is better to sail on a ship under an experienced master," said he, however, "than in a vessel captained by one who does not understand. Let us still trust in God, whether the motto is on the coin or not."

Novelty at a London Wedding.

Every girl married this fall in the Fifth avenue region of New York has seemed to strive to introduce a note of originality at her wedding, either in the bridesmaids' costumes or in the gown of the bride herself. The most novel idea of all, however, was introduced at the wedding of Miss Hobson to Lord Lawrence's son in London a few days ago, says the New York Press. Instead of a trail of bridesmaids and a page Miss Hobson had little boys in hunting dress, as worn in the evening, pink coats and light knee breeches. They even carried jockeys' caps.

Post Cards For Orphans.

Postmaster General Meyer has ordered that hereafter souvenir post cards received at the dead letter office of the department that are not returnable to senders because of defective addresses and other reasons be sent to the orphan asylums and children's homes in Washington, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch. Between 40,000 and 60,000 of these cards are held at the dead letter office.

PLAN OF PHILOCALIAN

Club to War on Low Neck Gowns and Cocktails.

TO REFORM BY EXAMPLE.

Organization of Women Also Bars Hansom Rides and the "Peekaboo" Waist—To Be No Brass Band Display, Says Its Head.

"Now, I am not a professional reformer. I am not old fashioned either. I rather believe I am up to date. I am not one of those who cherish the delusion that you can march around with a brass band, take the world by the nape of the neck and say, 'You take this road.' But we are in earnest in this matter. We intend to show our earnestness by practicing what we preach, by setting an example. In that way we shall differ from some reformers who have attained the professional class."

With these prefatory remarks Dr. Adelaide Wallenstein, who resides at 305 West Eightieth street, New York, announced the entry into the lists of the Philocalian, a new club, the membership of which includes twenty-three women, there to do battle with those factors which have stalked into modern life and, as this organization sees them, threaten to demoralize society. These things, which are classed as adjuncts of a personage who usually is painted in red garb, with a pair of horns adorning his rather lofty brow, number about a half dozen, says the New York Herald.

First and foremost the low neck gown is stamped with disapproval. "Philocalian," taken from the Greek, but given domesticated spelling because of ordinary usage, means literally "love of the beautiful." It is held, however, that the low neck gown "has attained such an accent on the first syllable that its lines have exceeded artistic ethics. Dr. Wallenstein explains:

"I do not mean that we shall wear collars that fit up so tightly under the ears as to resemble certain sections of armor that were in vogue when knights were bold. But we shall wear gowns that are cut not lower than the clavicle."

The "peekaboo" waist is under the ban. It is regarded as a means by which the low neck gown practically has been transformed into use for wear at any hour of the day. It has served to abolish the clock's regulations as to the season for the low cut gown.

The cocktail? Never! It is anathema, whether it be of the Fairbanks variety or charmingly embellished with the cherry that is red or the olive that is green. The high ball stands elbow to elbow with the cocktail, no matter how large the proportion of ice and seltzer to the third ingredient.

The hansom, too, except as used as a convenience and serving a utilitarian purpose, suffers the affixing of the seal of disapprobation. It is classed with the other agencies of life which already have been enumerated, especially when it is used by unchaperoned young women for drives down the avenue or through the park, thus allowing them to invite glances from young men who parade the pedestrian ways.

Report had it that the popular song, too, was to find its strains challenged. But this is denied.

"There is little of the classical about the usual popular song, goodness knows," said Dr. Wallenstein. "It certainly does not conduce to study of the old masters. But it is sometimes the only music which some persons find opportunity to enjoy. As such it serves a purpose that is not bad."

In the same way the after theater supper is to be bounded on all sides by certain limitations. A bite of luncheon at home after the theater is held to be much better.

"Not that we will pledge ourselves never to have a supper at a public restaurant after attending a theatrical performance," said Dr. Wallenstein, "but we believe such suppers are not best for young women. They too often serve as the introduction of knowledge of highballs and cocktails and the scores of other drinking concoctions, until some girls are as familiar with the dozens and dozens of mixtures that circulate over a bar as is the man about town."

"Then there is another feature. Too many girls meet their young men on street corners. They should be provided with some place of amusement. If I were a rich woman I should start a movement to provide such a place—some good, cozy place where they could sing proper songs and dance and play and have a good time under proper chaperonage."

"We merely have the welfare of young women at heart. We do not intend to imply, either, that we lack confidence in the young women of today. All the things we have mentioned are conventionalities, I know. But in their very conventionality lies the danger of harm. One step leads to another, however harmless may have been the intention with which the first step was taken. We merely wish to set such an example as we can in the hope that it may do some good. Our protest against these factors of social life, as I have said, will partake of no brass band display."

The New Poor.

Sad results of the American financial crisis are reported, says Punch. It is said that several multimillionaires have been reduced to the ranks of mere millionaires and that they are being cut by their former equals, who refuse to have anything to do with paupers.

RUSHVILLE, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 23, 1907.

The way that Weston is getting over the ground at the age of seventy must be somewhat of a shock to Professor Osler.

New York seems to have a hard time trying to find out who was elected mayor at the last election, but it is to be noted that Mr. McClellan still holds the seat.

Rushville will have the latest and most improved house cleaning machine in operation the coming spring. This machine will be a boon to the housewives. The next thing they need, and in fact they need it more urgently than a housecleaning machine, is a machine that will take the place of the hired girl.

There are many things for the people of Indiana to be thankful for, but no one thing that should command more gratitude than the following from Governor Hanly's message: "The public conscience has continued to be and still is stirred and quickened. Civil concepts are higher and clearer. Moral worth is more keenly appreciated, and wrong doing—public and private—and social weakness of every kind more deeply deplored."

The New York World, as well as numerous other Democratic papers, is still worried about the "peerless leader." After calling attention to his defeat in his own State and in Kentucky, and inferring therefrom that his influence lacks a good deal of being what many imagine it to be, the World says: "The Republican majorities in Nebraska and Kentucky ought to mean the elimination of Mr. Bryan from the leadership of the Democratic party. Why should he be nominated for president, or why should he be allowed to dictate the Democratic nomination?"

In Rushville the money scare has had no noticeable influence, but reports from other parts of the State indicate that the money stringency is causing some inconvenience. However, the situation is easing up, es-

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER

Indianapolis, Nov. 23.—A call for a meeting of the Republican state committee early in December will be issued by Chairman Goodrich. Some of the preliminary arrangements will be made then for the conventions to elect district committeemen and for the state convention. It is not likely that there will be any change from the program followed in former years of holding the district conventions during the first two weeks in January, and the state convention before the last of April. The state convention this time will be much smaller than the convention two years ago owing to the reduced vote in the last general election, when the Republican plurality was but 31,000. There will be one delegate for each 200 votes cast for Fred A. Sims for secretary of state, making a total of about 1,450. The winning candidates, therefore, will have to obtain in the neighborhood of 740 delegates. In spite of the fact that there are four candidates for governor, it would be possible for one of them to win on the first ballot even if each had his own district solid. Charles W. Miller of Gosheim, will have about 120 delegates in the Thirteenth district. James E. Watson's district will have about 122 delegates; former Attorney General Taylor's district, 140, and Lieutenant Governor Miller's district, about 95. The possibility of a deadlock is not as great as many of the party workers seem to feel, as there will be nearly one thousand delegates in the districts that will have no candidates for first place on the ticket. None of the details for the state convention have yet been considered, but the first day will be devoted to the appointment of the committees and the delivery of the keynote speech. Up to this time no one has been mentioned as the orator of the occasion. On the first day of the convention it is likely that the delegates-at-large to the national convention will be elected and a strong resolution adopted endorsing the candidacy of Vice President Fairbanks for president. It is the understanding now that the delegates-at-large will be Senators Beveridge, Hemenway, Governor Hanly and Chairman Goodrich. It has been the custom of the Republicans for many years to elect the two senators, the governor and the state chairman for these positions and there will be no deviation at this time. The nominations for governor and other places on the ticket will be made on the following day. The district conventions will name several new members of the state committee. The old members who are expected to be re-elected are Phelps Darby of the First district; Joe Barr of the Second; Joe Throop of the Third; Dan Chapin of the Fifth; Oliver Ensley of the Seventh; George Dinwiddie of the Ninth, and John Moorman of the Thirteenth.

Democratic gubernatorial booms have been launched for Maj. G. V. Menzies of Mt. Vernon and Benj. F. Shively of South Bend. The Menzies affair is a straightout proposition that he will make the race. Shively's is the work of Bryan enthusiasts who first followed the South Bend man in the exciting campaign of 1896 when he was the Democratic nominee for governor. One of Maj. Menzies's closest friends is authority for the statement that the major has been looking over the political field with a good deal of care of late and that he has made up his mind to dip his oars when the proper time comes. Benjamin F. Shively's boom appears to have been sprung by some of the "original" Bryan men who fought side by side with him in 1896. Several local Democrats are saying that they have it from reliable sources that Mr. Shively's name will be placed before the state convention. He would probably not make an aggressive fight, they said, but would assume a receptive attitude and depend upon his strong hold on the Democratic masses and his record to win him the nomination. Thomas R. Marshall of Columbia City, who is willing to be the Democratic nominee for governor next year, was prevented at the Bryan banquet at Lafayette from delivering the speech he had prepared on "Is the Democratic party an Old Fogey Party?" through the impatience of the crowd to hear Bryan, but he has gained his point by having it printed pecially since the government has announced that it would issue Panama Canal bonds and one year interest-bearing notes. The government's purpose to draw out the money of the hoarders has a sentimental effect which will register itself on the bourses on both sides of the Atlantic. The Panama Canal bonds which will be issued to the amount of $50,000,000, which will bear 2 per cent interest and which will run thirty years, will be in denominations as low as $20. These will be quickly subscribed for, and as they can be used as the basis of banknote issues, they will put a large amount of additional currency into circulation. The money which the government gets for the bonds will be deposited in the national bank and will be utilized in trade channels. Through the 3 per cent interest-bearing notes of the government, which are to run a year and which may amount to $100,000,000 in the aggregate, an immediate expansion in the circulation will take place which will throw a vast amount of currency into trade. The president will thus unlock the hoards of currency which have been pouring into safe-deposit vaults and into private receptacles in the past few weeks. The improvement in the financial situation, which had already set in, will by the government's action be immediately strengthened and made permanent.

The stock market in the East shows marked improvement. Sanity is gradually asserting itself and the frightened ones are gathering courage. If the people will act on the advice of those two great political leaders, Roosevelt and Bryan, the financial situation will right itself in short order. Roosevelt says: "There is no particle of risk involved in letting business take its natural course, and the people can help themselves and the country most by putting back into active circulation the money they are hoarding." Bryan says: "The man who will draw his money out of the bank now when he does not need it is in the same class as the man who would refuse to aid his country in time of war."

Democratic gubernatorial booms have been launched for Maj. G. V. Menzies of Mt. Vernon and Benj. F. Shively of South Bend. The Menzies affair is a straightout proposition that he will make the race. Shively's is the work of Bryan enthusiasts who first followed the South Bend man in the exciting campaign of 1896 when he was the Democratic nominee for governor. One of Maj. Menzies's closest friends is authority for the statement that the major has been looking over the political field with a good deal of care of late and that he has made up his mind to dip his oars when the proper time comes. W HERE was it, dear, that we met before,
For surely we met in an ancient time?
Perhaps 'twas a thousand years or more,
In some faroff star or alien clime.
Was I a rover in Cleopatra's barge
And you the maiden who held her fan,
Or were you a lady at Nero's court
And I a slave at your bidding ran?
Perhaps 'twas later—in Louis' time—
We met at Versailles, 'neath the sunny skies,
Where Montespan's sight and Maintenon's wiles
Were naught to the light of your soft, sweet eyes.

It might have been in the forest's shade
I paused and landed my bark canoe,
And you were a dark eyed Indian maid
And I was your Hiawatha true.
What matter? We met and life was sweet;
We loved and parted and died. Who shall say?
And I've come back to earth just to find
You, my sweet,
To love you again in this new fashioned way.

Today as we pass on the busy street
Do you remember the time we met?
And are you guessing where we shall meet
When we shall die and the world forget?
—Margaret Hobson.

FULFILLMENT.
PASSION—it was rounded
By love's divinity;
Love—its deeps I sounded—
'Twas life's infinity;
Life—'twas ever hounded
By death's finality;
Death—and, lo, 'twas bounded
By God's eternity.
—Gertrude Huntington McGibbert.

and is ready to send it to any one who wants to read it. This is only one example of Mr. Marshall's hustling qualities. Whereas he used to be too busy to make very many speeches he is now accepting about every invitation that comes his way.

Eleventh district Republicans are now casting about for a candidate for district chairman. J. Wood Willson, a well known Marion capitalist, has been mentioned, but he has refused to enter the race. It is the understanding among Willson's friends that he is personally opposed to running for any office and it is not believed by them that he would accept the district chairmanship. The only candidate now is Harry Bendall of Huntington, whose friends have been doing some work in his behalf lately. It seems to be the desire now of most of the party leaders in the Eleventh to agree upon someone for district chairman who will not be unfriendly to any of the candidates for congress. The situation is greatly complicated because of the large number of men who are seeking the congressional nomination. At this time there are about a dozen prospective congressional candidates in the Eleventh.

CURRENT COMMENT

A New Militia Rifle.
"Shall the national rifle matches of 1908 be shot with the Krag or the new Springfield?" is one of the important matters which will come before the national board for the promotion of rifle practice at its annual meeting in Washington next January. There is some question as to whether the ordnance department will be able to supply the new Springfield of "model 1903" to the national guard in time for the outdoor practice of 1908. Obviously it would be unfair to require the teams to use in the matches rifles to which they had been unable to accustom themselves in spring and summer practice. The regular troops will soon be completely equipped with the model of 1903.

The new Springfield would long since have been in the hands of the national guard had it not been for changes in the ammunition, which, while greatly increasing the range and efficiency of the weapons, necessitated rehammering and thus delayed their issue. A new powder has also been adopted, calculated to reduce the erosion attendant on high velocity, and it may take some time to secure a sufficient supply of powder. General Crozier, chief of ordnance, expects to be able to state definitely by Jan. 1 whether the war department will be in a position to honor requisitions for the 1903 model for equipping the militia in time for spring practice. As many of the Krags now in the hands of the militia-men have sadly worn barrels, they are hoping that the new rifles can be issued in the spring to avoid the expense of drawing new Krag barrels, only to be shortly discarded for the new Springfields.

Merciful Murder.
We have accepted with decent protest the idea of judicial murder to satisfy the majesty of the law, but it is a far cry from the taking of life as a punishment for a capital crime to the taking of it merely to shorten the agonies of existence where the case of the patient is hopeless. Resort to a lethal dose of poison in certain cases was advocated not long ago by a man of science, and, although his theory found champions, the sentiment of the country was strongly against it. The question is again brought to the fore by an incident in Edith Wharton's latest novel, where the plot turns on a "merciful" murder. No softer name can be given to the act of a nurse or doctor who shortens human life in order to shorten misery.

Women Will Soon Be Equal to Men.

By CHARLOTTE PERKINS GILMAN, Writer and Lecturer.

WOMEN are now merely potential beings. The world has witnessed one period when women were VASTLY SUPERIOR to men. That was when men hunted and fished and women spun, wove, tilled the fields, made the bread, nursed the babies and kept things moving along pretty smoothly by industry and their ability to produce.

Then came the time when MAN BECAME DOMINANT. No-body knows just exactly how it came about or exactly when or whose fault it was, man's or woman's, but one fact soon made itself apparent, and that is that MAN LIKED IT SO WELL, this being looked up to as a superior creature, that he has done and is still doing everything within his power to prevent any change by which women shall come into their own right of sex equality.

THIS IS THE PERIOD WHICH IS NOW UPON US, THE PERIOD OF MAN'S DOMINANCE, AND IT IS AGAINST THIS THAT WOMEN HAVE BEGUN IN THIS CENTURY TO STRUGGLE. THE THIRD PERIOD WHICH WE ARE TO FACE IS TO BE THE GLORIOUS PERIOD WHEN THERE WILL BE NO QUESTION OF SUPERIORITY OR INFERIORITY, BUT WHEN MEN AND WOMEN SHALL MEET ON AN EQUAL PLANE.

The law expressly declares that no one can effect the death of another with a deliberate and premeditated design without being guilty of murder. To place discretion in the hands of any circle or body, whatever their relations to the subject of the execution, would be to invite anarchy. If there is one justifiable case there are thousands, and in view of the number of actual murders committed it is reasonable to suppose that occasions would be made for the "legal" removal of afflicted ones whose early death might be desired by a third party.

Dr. Taylor since his incumbency of the mayoralty of San Francisco has displayed more vigor than the best of his predecessors and has been a living refutation of the theory that a man has passed his period of usefulness when he reaches mature years. There is more work in the doctor today than in nine-tenths of the younger men of his community, and he has twenty times as much good sense and experience to bring to bear upon it.

Autolog as a Fad.
A dispatch from Paris indicates that the popularity of automobiles, if not waning, is not on the increase in France. The automobile is a very useful machine, and its popularity does not depend on the prevalence of a fad. Indeed, it is doubtful whether the fad dists, who have only considered it from the standpoint of sport and speed, have not prevented the development of a more solid popularity—that which comes from recognition of usefulness.

Fashions are transitory, but anything that meets a real economic need endures. The automobile does that and has therefore come to stay and will one day be more numerous on that account than it could possibly be while regarded more as a plaything than a machine of solid merit. Paris is full of rich idlers ready for every novelty, the more costly the better. Now that the automobile has become the vehicle of practical and homely commerce, the "sports" will throw it over, which is, after all, a good thing for the general public.

Bombardment Continued For Two Hours But Preacher Never Lost His Temper

The following is from the Shelbyville Liberal, referring to a popular young Methodist minister, who has many friends in Rushville:

Last night, while the Rev. S. A. Morrow, of the Waldron M. E. church, was peacefully studying at his desk, his house was entered by a great crowd and he and his family were "pounded" for two hours. The invaders used live stock and dead stock, sweet and sour things, canned and uncanned, raw and cooked, dry and wet goods. Their names were not all secured, but it is sufficient to say they were the good Methodists who surprised their pastor and family and spent a pleasant evening at the parsonage.

The pastor did not suffer from the attack but enjoyed it and feels better than before.

Mrs. B. F. Miller entertained at dinner last night at her home in North Morgan street seventeen young ladies, honoring her niece, Miss Hazel Spurrier, a bride-to-be. The affair was a smart one in every respect: the home was tastefully decorated and the color effect in the dining room was carried out after the taste of Miss Spurrier. Flying cupids hung from the green shaded chandeliers and white and pink streamers extended to the dining table. At each cover was a handpainted water color place card, bearing the name of each guest. An innovation cleverly planned by Mrs. Miller was a large heart containing a number of smaller hearts, to which were attached long pink ribbon streamers, each guest took a ribbon and pulled forth one of the hearts, and to the one receiving the darted heart—well, we are not privileged to say who drew it or what omen it carries with it. Potted plants, autumn branches, smilax and pink and white roses were used profusely in the dining room. Miss Spurrier will be married in December.

From her station Helen could see the whole tableau, all but the men on the stairs, where her vision was cut off. She saw the dance girls crouched behind their partners or leaning far out from the wall with parted lips, the men eager, yet fearful, the bartender with a half polished glass poised high. Then a quick movement across the hall suddenly diverted her absorbed attention. She saw a man rip aside the drapery of the box opposite and lean so far out that he seemed in peril of falling. He undertook to sight a weapon at Glenister, who was just passing from his view. At her first glance Helen gasped, her heart gave one fierce lunge, and she cried out.

The distance across the pit was so short that she saw his every line and lineament clearly; it was the brother she had sought these years and years. Before she knew or could check it the blood clapped forth.

"Drury!" she cried aloud, at which he whipped his head about, while amazement and some other emotion she could not gauge spread slowly over his features. For a long moment he stared at her without movement or sign while the drama beneath went on, then he drew back into his retreat with the dazed look of one doubting his senses, yet fearful of putting them to the test. For her part, she saw nothing except her brother vanishing slowly into the shadows, as though stricken at her glance, the curtains closing before his livid face, and then pandemonium broke loose at her feet.

Glenister, holding his enemies at bay, had retreated to the double doors leading to the theater. His coup had been executed so quickly and with such lack of turmoil that the throng outside knew nothing of it till they saw a man walk backward through the door. As he did so he reached forth and slammed the wide wings shut before his face, then turned and dashed into the press. Inside the dance hall loud sounds arose as the officers clattered down the stairs and made after their quarry. They tore the barrier apart in time to see, far down the saloon, an eddying swirl as though some great fish were lashing through the lily pads of a pond, and then the swinging doors closed behind Glenister.

Helen made her way from the theater as she had come, unobserved and unobserving, but she walked in a dream. Emotions had chased each other too closely tonight to be distinguishable, so she went mechanically through the narrow alley to Front street and thence to her home.

Glenister meanwhile had been swallowed up by the darkness, the night enfolding him without sign or trace. As he ran he considered what course to follow—whether to carry the call to his comrades in town or to make for the creek and Dextery. The vigilantes might still distrust him, and yet he owed them warning. McNamara's men were moving so swiftly that action must be speedy to forestall them. Another hour and the net would be closed, while it seemed that whichever course he chose they would snare one or the other—either the friends who remained in town or Dex and Slapjack out in the hills. With daylight those two would return and walk unheeding into the trap, while if he bore the word to them first then the vigilantes would be jailed before dawn. As he drew near Cherry Malotte's house he saw a light through the drawn curtains. A heavy raindrop plashed upon his face, another followed, and then he heard the patter of falling water increasing swiftly. Before he could gain the door the storm had broken. It swept up the street with tropical violence, while a breath sighed out of the night, lifting the litter from underfoot and pelting him with flying particles. Over the roofs the wind rushed with the rising moan of a hurricane, while the night grew suddenly noisy ahead of the tempest.

He entered the door without knocking to find the girl removing her coat. Her face gladdened at sight of him, but he checked her with quick and cautious words, his speech almost drowned by the roar outside.

"Are you alone?" She nodded, and he slipped the bolt behind him, saying: "The marshals are after me. We just had a 'run in' at the Northern, and I'm on the go. No—nothing serious yet, but they want the vigilantes, and I must get them word. Will you help me?" He rapidly recounted the row of the last ten minutes, while she nodded her quick understanding.

"You're safe here for a little while," she told him, "for the storm will check them. If they should come, there's a back door leading out from the kitchen and a side entrance yonder. In my room you'll find a French window. They can't corner you very well."

"Slapjack and Dex are out at the shafthouse—you know—that quartz claim on the mountain above the Midas." He hesitated. "Will you lend me your saddle horse? It's a black night, and I may kill him."

"What about these men in town?"

"I'll warn them first, then hit for the hills."

She shook her head. "You can't do it. You can't get out there before daylight if you wait to rouse these people, and McNamara has probably telephoned the mines to send a party up to the quartz claim after Dex. He knows where the old man is as well as you do, and they'll raid him before dawn."

"I'm afraid so, but it's all I can offer. Will you give me the horse?"

"No! He's only a pony, and you'd founder him in the tundra. The mud is knee deep. I'll go myself."

"Good heavens, girl, in such a night! Why, it's worth your life! Listen to it! The creeks will be up and you'll have to swim. No, I can't let you."

"He's a good little horse, and he'll take me through." Then coming close she continued: "Oh, boy! Can't you see that I want to help? Can't you see that I—die for you if it would do any good?" He gazed gravely into her wide blue eyes and said awkwardly: "Yes, I know. I'm sorry things are—as they are—but you wouldn't have me lie to you, little woman?"

"No. You're the only true man I ever knew. I guess that's why I love you. And I do love you, oh, so much! I want to be good and worthy to love you too."

She laid her face against his arm and caressed him with clinging tenderness, while the wind yelled loudly about the eaves and the windows drummed beneath the rain. His heavy brows knit themselves together as she whispered: "I love you! I love you! I love you!" with such an agony of longing in her voice that her soft accents were sharply distinguishable above the turmoil. The growing wildness seemed a part of the woman's passion, which whipped and harried her like a willow in a blast.

"Things are fearfully jumbled," he said finally. "And this is a bad time to talk about them. I wish they might be different. No other girl would do what you have offered tonight."

"Then why do you think of that woman?" she broke in fiercely. "She's bad and false. She betrayed you once; she's in the play now; you've told me so yourself. Why don't you be a man and forget her?"

"I can't," he said simply. "You're wrong, though, when you think she's bad. I found tonight that she's good and brave and honest. The part she played was played innocently. I'm sure of that, in spite of the fact that she'll marry McNamara. It was she who heard them plotting and risked her reputation to warn me."

Cherry's face whitened, while the shadowy eagerness that had rested there died utterly. "She came into that dive alone? She did that?" He nodded, at which she stood thinking for some time, then continued: "You're honest with me, Roy, and I'll be the same with you. I'm tired of deceit, tired of everything. I tried to make you think she was bad, but in my own heart I knew differently all the time. She came here today and humbled herself to get the truth, humbled herself to me, and I sent her away. She suspected, but she didn't know, and when she asked for information I insulted her. That's the kind of a creature I am. I sent her back to Struve, who offered to tell her the whole story."

"What does that renegade want?"

"Can't you guess?"

"Why, I'd rather— The young man ground his teeth, but Cherry hastened. "You needn't worry; she won't see him again. She loathes the ground he walks on."

"And yet he's no worse than that other scoundrel. Come, girl, we have work to do; we must act, and act quickly." He gave her his message to Dextery, then she went to her room and slipped into a riding habit. When she came out he asked: "Where is your raincoat? You'll be drenched in no time."

"I can't ride with it. I'll be thrown, anyway, and I don't want to be all bound up. Water won't hurt me."

She thrust her tiny revolver into her dress, but he took it and upon examination shook his head.

"If you need a gun you'll need a good one." He removed the belt from his own waist and buckled his Colts about her.

"But you!" she objected.

"I'll get another in ten minutes." Then as they were leaving, he said: "One other request, Cherry. I'll be in hiding for a time, and I must get word to Miss Chester to keep watch of her uncle, for the big fight is on at last and the boys will hang him sure if they catch him. I owe her this last warning. Will you send it to her?"

"I'll do it for your sake, not for her, no, no; I don't mean that. I'll do the right thing all round. Leave it here and I'll see that she gets it tomorrow. And, Roy, be careful of yourself." Her eyes were stary and in their depths lurked neither selfishness nor jealousy now, only that mysterious glory of a woman who makes sacrifice.

Together they scurried back to the stable, and yet, in that short distance, she would have been swept from her feet had he not seized her. They blew in through the barn door, streaming and soaked by the blinding sheets that drove scythe-like ahead of the wind. He struck a light, and the pony whinnied at recognition of his mistress. She stroked the little fellow's muzzle while Glenister cinched on his saddle. Then when she was at last mounted, she leaned forward:

"Will you kiss me once, Roy, for the last time?"

He took her rain wet face between his hands and kissed her upon the lips as he would have saluted a little maid. As he did so, unseen by both of them, a face was pressed for an instant against the pane of glass in the stable wall.

"You're a brave girl and may God bless you," he said, extinguishing the light. He hung the door wide and she rode out into the storm. Locking the portal, he plunged back toward the house to write his hurried note, for there was much to do and scant time for his accomplishment, despite the helping hand of the hurricane. He heard the voice of Bering as it thundered on the golden sands, and knew that the first great storm of the fall had come. Henceforth he saw that the violence of men would rival the rising elements, for the deeds of this night would stir their passions as Aeolus was rousing the hate of the sea.

He neglected to bolt the house door as he entered, but flung off his dripping coat and, seizing pad and pencil, scrawled his message. The wind screamed about the cabin, the lamp flared smokily and Glenister felt a draft suck past him as though from an open door at his back as he wrote:

I can't do anything more. The end has come, and it has brought the hatred and bloodshed that I have been trying to prevent. I played the game according to your rules, but they forced me back to first principles in spite of myself, and now I don't know what the finish will be. Tomorrow will tell. Take care of your uncle, and if you should wish to communicate with me, go to Cherry Malotte. She is a friend to both of us. Always your servant, ROY GLENISTER.

As he sealed this he paused, while he felt the hair on his neck rise and bristle and a chill race up his spine. His heart fluttered, then pounded onward till the blood thumped audibly at his ear drums and he found himself swaying in rhythm to its beat. The muscles of his back cringed and rippled at the proximity of some hovering peril, and yet an irresistible feeling forbade him to turn. A sound came from close behind his chair—the drip, drip, drip of water. It was not from the eaves, nor yet from a faulty shingle. His back was to the kitchen door, through which he had come, and, although there were no mirrors before him, he felt a menacing presence as surely as though it had touched him. His ears were tuned to the finest pin pricks of sound, so that he heard the faint, sighing "squish" of a sodden shoe upon which a weight had shifted. Still something chained him to his seat. It was as though his soul laid a restraining hand upon his body, waiting for the instant.

He let his hand seek his hip carelessly, but remembered where his gun was. Mechanically he addressed the note in shaking characters, while behind him sounded the constant drip, drip, drip that he knew came from saturated garments. For a long moment he sat, till he heard the stealthy click of a gunlock muffled by finger pressure. Then he set his face and slowly turned to find the Bronco Kid standing behind him as though risen from the sea, his light clothes wet and clinging, his feet centered in a spreading puddle. The dim light showed the convulsive fury of his features above the leveled weapon, whose hammer was curled back like the head of a striking adder, his eyes gleaming with frenzy. Glenister's mouth was powder dry, but his mind was leaping riotously like dust before a gale, for he divined himself to be in the deadliest peril of his life. When he spoke the calmness of his voice surprised himself.

NO HEARING TODAY

The Bradley Case Has Been Given a Saturday Rest.

Washington, Nov. 23.—The criminal court in which Mrs. Annie M. Bradley is being tried on the charge of murdering former United States Senator Arthur M. Brown of Utah, held no session today. The proceedings will be resumed Monday. When court adjourned yesterday the defense had practically completed its presentation of proof, very little remaining except the testimony of experts who will be introduced for the purpose of showing that when Mrs. Bradley shot Senator Brown she was insane. Several eminent alienists have volunteered for this service, and it is now understood that they will be called early next week. The hypothetical question which will be submitted to them has been prepared. It contains 13,000 words.

Mrs. Bradley's mother was recalled yesterday for the purpose of clearing up a point; several more of the Salt Lake witnesses were examined as to the conduct and bearing of Mrs. Bradley in that city, and Mrs. Bradley's uncle, Lyman Shrewsbury of California, told of instances of insanity and eccentricity in Mrs. Bradley's family. Judge Henderson, Senator Brown's law partner, narrated interviews with Mrs. Bradley relative to her intimacy with Mr. Brown, and a number of Brown's letters to Mrs. Bradley were read. The reading of the letters furnished the most interesting incident of the day. They were filled with mingled protestations of love and reproaches for interest in other men, and they stirred Mrs. Bradley to deep emotion. She listened eagerly to the reading, and, closing her eyes, seemed entirely lost in the memories they awakened.

The defendant was not in buoyant mood during the day. Her manner was dejected, her speech infrequent and her face pale. Evidently there had been a reaction after the conclusion of her testimony Thursday. She looked as if she had had a sleepless night. She was not so depressed, however, that she could not laugh over the testimony of her uncle indicating that her aunt had been jealous of him.

BUSINESS IS QUIET

Trade Has Been Quick to Notice Unsettled Conditions.

New York, Nov. 23.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade today says: While a number of cities report that the tone of affairs has taken a turn for the better, actual business, taking the country as a whole, shows an increased degree of quiet business at wholesale and retail, a working out of the continued scarcity of currency at some points, of lessening activity in industry and of the continuance of unseasonably mild weather with its natural effect upon distribution of winter goods. There is evident in wholesale trade circles an indisposition to do business for future periods, and the large numbers of cancellations resulting from the past unsettlement are a subject of widespread discussion.

In industry the features are the working out more fully of the prompt slowing-down tendency noted for several weeks past, the iron and steel industry, with its kindred lines, such as coke and coal, showing quickest results. The feeling is widespread that the sharper and quicker this process occurs the sooner the situation will right itself when confidence is fully restored. The lumber industry is quieter and southern lumbering and manufacturing operations are reported less active.

Mr. Harris's Testimony.

New York, Nov. 23.—William R. Harris, vice president and chairman of the board of directors of the American Tobacco company, on the stand in the hearing on the complaint of the United States against the American Tobacco company and others before United States Commissioner Shields, said that approximately two-thirds of the stock of the British-American Tobacco company was owned by the American Tobacco company.

Lewis Jury Disagreed.

St. Louis, Nov. 23.—After having been in session over twenty-two hours the jury in the case of Edward G. Lewis, charged with misusing the mails in connection with the People's United States bank, reported to the United States district court that the members were unable to agree. The judge then discharged the jury.

Possible Bondsman Shy.

New York, Nov. 23.—Howard Maxwell, the indicted former president of the Borough bank of Brooklyn, unable to procure a bondsman to act as surety for him in the sum of $30,000 on three indictments charging grand larceny and forgery, has been compelled to remain in jail.

BURYING OF A TOWN.

Why Roosevelt, Ariz., Is to Be Destroyed by Flood.

SCHEME TO BENEFIT MILLIONS

Government Now Preparing to Dam Up Great Lake a Hundred Feet Deep Over the Town to Irrigate Vast Stretches of Arid Land—Inhabitants to Move and Leave Buildings Intact.

A town under water, fish swimming around its church spires and in and out of its chimneys, will soon be in Arizona, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The water above the streets of this town will be 100 feet deep. Not even the tallest spire will come near reaching the surface.

This submerged town will stand there beneath its weight of waters exactly as it is today for years and years to come, perhaps for ages. There will be no current to disturb it. Succeeding generations of fishermen will drop their baited hooks down into the darkness of its submerged streets. It may be that a thousand years from now, after the very existence of this town is forgotten, the waters will recede and the long hidden roofs will come into sight and a new civilization will go there to stare and wonder at the queer houses in which people lived ten centuries ago.

Books may be written about it. The first newspaper reporter who visits it may speculate upon the use to which those old barbarians put that strange structure with its fingerlike tower pointing skyward, and some antiquarian will explain that it was a church. And it may be that a man of a thousand years from now will stand upon the dripping stage of its opera house and wonder to what use that forum was put, just as we marvel now at the forum of Pompeii and Herculaneum.

Scientific men declare that the great depth of calm water over the sunken town will preserve from decay every piece of wood in it, and if it remains submerged it will be so preserved for 10,000 years. So it is no great stretch of the imagination to suppose that this town of today, so much like hundreds of other western towns, will be a great curiosity when it emerges from the depths in some future time.

This town of Roosevelt, Ariz., has a population of nearly 3,000 men, women and children. It has four hotels, many store buildings of brick, a large opera house, churches of brick and stone and all the modern conveniences of a city of its size. It stands in the valley of the Salt river, with high and picturesque mountains upon both sides of it.

South of this town of Roosevelt the United States government is building across the Salt river valley, from mountain side to mountain side, a great dam of granite and cement, a solid wall of stone two miles long and a hundred feet high. When it is finished the flood gates through which the waters of the Salt river now flow will be closed, and the downcoming waters obstructed by this wall of rock will foam and churn against it and, finding not even a crevice for escape, will flow backward and spread out over the valley and its fertile farms, covering the streets of Roosevelt, its largest town, submerging its sidewalks, lapping higher and higher over its walls and spires until where now a rich valley lies there will be a vast lake of fresh water stretching for miles and miles up the valley from the dam, its shores the mountain slopes.

The government has condemned and paid for all the lands to be inundated, and all of the buildings. No man in Roosevelt will have the right to carry away a stick or a stone of the buildings. The government owns them all, and the government has decided not to attempt a removal of anything. That would be too expensive. Its agents will simply collect the rents until a certain day, and then it will give out a warning to all people in the valley and in the town to move out, and upon the appointed day the waters will arise and the town will sink beneath them.

The dam, built in the most thorough manner by government experts of solid granite quarried from the nearby mountain side, is massive enough to withstand the pressure of countless billions of tons of water. It will stand as long as the rocks of the everlasting mountains, and even a million years from now, when Macaulay's New Zealander sits upon the Thames bridge and muses upon deserted London, the frontier town of Roosevelt may yet lie intact and undisturbed beneath the waters of the great Roosevelt dam.

The government is building this dam to store in it for irrigation purposes the flood waters of the Salt river. Below the dam the river flows through broad level lands lined by great mountain ranges. These bottom lands, without irrigation, are parched and barren for a great part of the year, but it is a black, loamy soil, and when water is given to it by irrigation it is wonderfully fertile.

Each spring when the snow melts in the mountains the waters go tumbling down the valley in a flood, and when it is over the river dwindles again from a raging giant of waters to a little dribbling streamlet, and the rootlets of a myriad of plants are gasping and dying for want of the water that ran to waste.

The government's big dam across the valley at Roosevelt will catch and save its fill of this flood water which runs to waste each spring, and all through the hot summer months the stored waters of this great inland sea will be doled out to the farmers along the valley for a hundred miles clear down to Phenix, the capital.

The dam, main canals and laterals necessary to this irrigation scheme will cost $3,000,000. The work has already been going on for four years. When it is done it will reclaim thousands of square miles of the richest soil in the world.

When the dam is full of water the overflow will pour over it through a system of gates made of bronze so they will not rust away.

The amount of storage water sent down the river from the dam will depend upon the demand from the farmers below. The river itself will be the main distributing canal. From its banks upon each side lateral canals will carry the water to ditches in all parts of the valley. Small dams will be built at different points along the river to raise the water high enough to give the needed flow.

Since the days of the Indians the Salt river valley has been famous for its fruits and vegetables, and during all that time they have been raised by irrigation. The Indians irrigated by means of crude ditches running out from the river to their small patches of cultivated land, and the white settlers have done the same, only their system of canals and diversion dams has been more modern and successful, but Indian and white alike could only secure water when the river was flowing, and there was always a danger that the old river would wash out through the canals and ruin their fields, which it has done many times during the flood period.

With the big dam, there is no such danger, however, for all the water will be caught and conserved and used when needed. The rainy season will be no more dangerous for the farmers of that wonderfully rich valley than the dry periods, for all the water will be caught in the big lake.

In preparation for the work upon the dam the government built a cement factory and a sawmill of its own and put a line of traction engines into operation between the dam site and the railroad town of Mesa, twenty-five miles away, to haul out all supplies. As the work is being done "for and in the name of the landowners of the Salt river valley," who must repay every cent of the cost to the government, a great deal of bookkeeping is necessary. The government erected the cement mill and charged it to the landowner and is now buying back the cement from the mill and giving him credit for it.

The mill is operated in the name of the people of the valley, and strict account is kept of every transaction. The valley lands above the dam that are to be submerged have been condemned and purchased and charged to the people of the valley below, and now the government is buying its alfalfa from these farms and crediting it back to them. This method applies to every bit of work done, for the government in these irrigation undertakings simply lends the money to the people who are to be benefited. The cost of the entire project is estimated, with ample margin for extra cost, and then the amount of available irrigable land in the valley below is figured up, and the estimated cost per acre is arrived at. The owners then mortgage their land to the government for the cost of the completed project, and the government, if it has the money, sets to work. From the time the first water is turned into the canals the landowners benefited begin paying for the project, generally at the rate of $2 or $3 per acre per year for a period of twenty years. As the money comes in the government uses it on other and like enterprises, and thus the work of reclamation is continuous.

A RUN ON HIS BANK.

Winsted (Conn.) Man's Little Joke With Local Financiers.

Ex-Judge Cornelius McAuliffe of Winsted, Conn., told a party of moneyed men who were discussing the financial situation that there had been a big run on his bank the other day.

Taking it for granted that he meant the bank where his money was deposited, Henry Stalker slyly disappeared. Upon his return, after learning that there had been no run on any of Winsted's banks, Stalker asked McAuliffe what he meant by spreading a false report, says a Winsted special dispatch to the New York World.

"I meant just what I said," replied McAuliffe. "I took ten loads of sand out of my bank, and if there is another man of sixty who can equal that for a day's work I would like to meet him."

New Pennsylvania Industry.

Paul Firman of Caledonia, Pa., has bought a 110 acre tract on which is the largest grove of wild persimmon trees in the mountains about Caledonia. He is now fencing in the tract as a protection for the possum, with which he will stock it, says a Caledonia correspondent of the Philadelphia Record. He says he will own the only possum farm in the world. The opossum does not reach the height of his glory until persimmons are ripe and the layers of white fat take on the spicy flavor of the fruit. Mr. Firman intends to develop the best variety of persimmon and the finest breed of opossum, and by next fall he expects to sell several hundred animals at fancy prices. One of the sources of revenue from the farm will be the sale of skins to fur dealers. This fur is rapidly becoming popular.

Ten Miles of Poppies.

Ten miles of street borders in Arlington Heights will be planted, says the Los Angeles Times, to poppies and sweet peas this fall.

RIVAL OF LUSITANIA.

Superb Appointments of Her Sister Ship, the Mauretania.

GREATER AND MAY BE FASTER

New Features Are a Nursery and Large Deck Shelter for Second Class Passengers—Magnificent Interior Decorations Cost More by $200,000. Has Nine Decks.

The fastest ocean express started from the foot of West Fifteenth street, New York, the other day for the Mersey, and another ship, the new Cunard liner Mauretania, which is confidently regarded as the speed successor of the Lusitania, started from Liverpool for New York, says the New York World.

The reign of the present speed queen is expected to be brief. While she may and probably will surpass her own past performances, the engineering sharps predict, the Lusitania can never hope to beat the Mauretania.

Lloyd's register for 1907-08 gives the dimensions of each of the two vessels: Length 760 feet and beam as 87.8 feet, but the depth of the Lusitania is 46 feet 2 inches and that of the Mauretania 46 feet 8 inches. The difference is 300 tons in favor of the younger sister. Mauretania is 300 tons heavier than Lusitania.

Over all the Mauretania is 700 feet long, according to the literature of the line, but the tape on the plans shows her to be about 787 feet over all. Lloyd's gives the length only between perpendiculars.

The sum of $200,000 more has been expended upon the interior decorations of the latter ship than upon those of the former. She has a nursery, which the Lusitania has not. It is in enameled white on mahogany, with panels portraying the nursery story of the "Four and Twenty Blackbirds." The Mauretania's suits are different, and the specialty in the Mauretania's grand scheme of splendid decoration, which is said to surpass in taste and richness that of any other ship, is a tone of dark mahogany. The grill work around her entrances and elevator shafts is more artistic and altogether different and more inviting, open and airy in effect than the corresponding details on the Lusitania.

Categorically the Mauretania has nine decks—the lower orlop, the orlop, the lower deck, which is made completely water tight, the main deck, the upper deck, on which is the main dining saloon; the shelter deck, on which is the upper dining saloon; the promenade deck, the upper promenade and the boat deck.

Near the forward end of the vessel, on the promenade deck, is the lookout. This apartment, situated in the fore end of the deck house, commands an uninterrupted view over the bow of the vessel and affords complete protection from the weather. Passengers will therefore be able to watch the progress of the vessel without being exposed to the wind resistance caused by the great speed at which she will travel.

A new feature in the second class accommodation is a large deck shelter, which must add greatly to the comfort of the passengers in cold or stormy weather. There is accommodation altogether for 2,200 passengers, of whom 500 are first and 500 second class.

The regal suits, one on each side of the vessel, comprise drawing room, dining room, two bedrooms, bathroom and private corridor, all shut off from the main corridor. They are furnished and decorated in magnificent style.

Dimensions and capacities are, according to the latest published literature of the Cunard line: Length, 790 feet; breadth, 88 feet; depth to boat deck, 80 feet; draft, fully loaded, 37 feet 6 inches; displacement on load draft, 45,000 tons; horsepower of turbine engines, 70,000; height to top of funnels, 155 feet; height to mastsheads, 216 feet; passenger accommodation, first class, 550; second class, 500; third class, 1,300, and crew, 800 to 900.

She is commanded by Captain J. Pritchard, formerly of the Caronia. The Mauretania is not only double bottomed, but double sided, the double bottom being carried well up the side of the ship. Doors between the water tight compartments at or below the water line can be closed automatically from the bridge. There are 175 water tight compartments.

The lookout makes his report by telephone, just as the chief steward orders his supplies by telephone from the stores department and the traveler in his room rings up the inquiry bureau for information. As a fighter the Mauretania, complying with the admiralty requirements, is fitted for an armament of twelve six-inch guns and twelve light, quick firing guns.

Her rudder and one set of steering gear are below water line, and in the way of engine and boiler rooms there are side bunkers well filled with coal or water, as good as any armor belt. Her bilge keels, or fins, to prevent her rolling, are the widest on any ship in the world.

The lounge room is decorated in Louis Seize style, of which the Petit Trainor is one of the best examples. The lounge and music room is tastefully paneled with what is aptly called plum pudding mahogany, selected so as to bring out the beauty of the grain. The big expanse of paneling is divided by sixteen pilasters of beautiful Fleur de Pecher marble, with capitals and bases of mercury gilt bronze and a chimney piece of the same material. Charming tapestry and cream silk curtains tone down the strong coloring of mahogany and gilding.

Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or Whitish discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Pains Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling in the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles when caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex. I want to send you a complete ten day's treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give this cure a trial, and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing how women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, as it tells her how to cure herself. You must have an operation, you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectively cures Leucorrhoea, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always results from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten day's treatment is yours also the book. Write today, as you may not see this offer again. Address: MRS. M. SUMMERS, Box H, Notre Dame, Ind., U. S. A.

THE OBITUARY OF LIVE MEN.

ROBT. L. TOMPKINS

Let's Send the Flowers Over Now.—Dead Men Can Neither See, Smell or Appreciate.

When Bob Tompkins lived in Milroy, where he spent his Lord Fountleroy days and up until the time he donned "long pants," his every visit to Rushville was a strenuous one and invariably full of incidents. In those days the "Westenders," or (Phillistines), held a grudge against the Milroy boys—and particularly against Bob—and if he let loose of his father's hand for a minute, while in town, they would be upon him and give him a good thrashing.

The corner of Main and First streets and South Main street was generally the scene of hostilities, and on many occasions the "gang" chased Bob down the pike and out of the city, pelting him with stones. When his father could not find him around town, when he was ready to start home, he knew that the boys had chased him over the river, and driving home he would pick him up south of the white bridge. After a while, coming to town, meant to Bob, coming to the white bridge, for he used to get out of his father's buggy and remain there all day.

One day the husky Milroy lad was cornered by the Westend bully, and he succeeded in giving him a good trouncing. After that Bob whipped the gang—one at a time—and was cock of the walk when he moved to town and "pa was sheriff."

When the base ball fever reached 105 in the shade in Rushville, Bob was considered the crack first baseman, and many a game was won by the timely hitting of the Tompkins brothers—Nick Tompkins, his brother playing the role of the boy wonder at that time. He became so proficient in the National game, that the Carthage citizens used to take up a collection of $3.00 to give him when they had a hard contest on hand. But he suffered a glass arm and lost his batting eye when they began to pay him money, and was soon assigned to the "down-and-out" bench. Winding up his career as an athlete, he went to Texas with "Chuck" Frazee, for his father's health, and since his return has been constantly and persistently on the chase of dollars, and likewise rolled up a few in his back yard.

After selling enough buggies in one year to the farmers of Rush county to last them for twenty years, he then went into the grocery business and pushed groceries on sane citizens in wholesale bunches. (Many of them still have some canned peaches and apples in their larders). He never did do anything by halves: it was a hurrah from the start, even when he was in the cigar manufacturing business.

He quit that business because he could not induce the women to smoke. Now he is in the lumber business and has many "knotty" problems to solve, but he is making a big go of it.

Mr. Tompkins is fond of game chickens (with dumplings) and for recreation he makes money. Charitable, good natured, happy-go-lucky, careless, amiable and all that sort of thing, he would have made—according to the signs of the zodiac—a good street fakir, lawyer or elder in a church. Like every other man without them, he is very fond of children: but he has to borrow them when he has the pleasure of their company.

LOCAL GRAIN DEALERS SAY THERE IS "NOTHING DOING"

Grain dealers say that there is almost nothing doing in their line as farmers are bringing nothing to town. Some time ago when wheat started away from the dollar mark there was a rush on the part of farmers to unload, but now there is nothing coming in. Those who held for dollar wheat have become discouraged and have let loose but some few are still holding on.

Easy to buy, easy to try, the best wholesome appetizing breakfast is Mrs. Austin's famous pancakes.
